

101 Terrorism: Detect, Prevent and Respond Workshop

Synopsis

Terrorist attacks occur more frequently all over the world and each time the attacker uses our own weaknesses against us. Training your entire work force to better understand the situation will make your facility less attractive for the attacker to choose it as a potential target. In this program we teach people without any police or military background how to be more aware, how to look at things in a different way, how to recognize anomalies, what is suspicious behavior and of course, how to respond to it within the means available to them. Your entire work force is the first responders and these people do matter in case of a threat. Identifying and recognizing a dangerous situation at an early stage will save lives and mitigate the impact of an attack.

Who should attend

Employers, HR, WSH Professionals, developers, main contractors, sub-contractors, professional engineers, resident technical officers, safety consultants, construction industry professionals or anyone who is interested in this topic

Trainer

Mr Kris V d Berghe started his Law enforcement career with the Belgian Federal Police. After Police Academy he got selected for a unit similar to the US Marshalls in US. His unit was responsible for transport and escort of higher risk criminals. After two years Kris successfully passed the admittance tests for the Secret Service. After 1.5 year of training he was first assigned to the counterterrorism and counter surveillance unit. From there he moved on to the Close protection division where he started on diplomatic assignments and worked closely with several foreign units and was part of multiple security details. After 6 years with the unit he became "teamleader" of his own prime minister's security detail from whom he received a personal letter of recommendation when moving to Singapore. With over 15 years of field experience Kris is now working as a security consultant and instructor for CCTP, a company that provides a variety of training courses for security professionals.
